

THE SWORD OF GOD

Jesus has blessed me in so many ways that I couldn't begin to count them. I have everything that a man could want: great health, freedom, a great marriage to the perfect wife, pursuing a true labor of love by working with children, and having all the material possessions a man could hope for. However, Jesus has not granted me children yet. And that is fine; my attitude has always been that if it's the will of God, then they will come; and if it's not, then that's God's will.

But through my decade as an educator and a child-advocate, I have worked with so many children that have experienced the one thing that no child should ever have to go through, and that is being sexually abused. Sexually abused children go through a multitude of issues when trying to recover. To begin with they often lose their self-esteem and self-worth, which causes them to engage in other destructive behavior (like drug abuse). Some lose so much of their self-esteem that they no longer feel that they deserve to be in a healthy relationship and begin to engage in risky sexual behavior (which often leads them into abusive relationships, pornography, and prostitution).

Now many progressives and their liberal supporters call for "therapy" for these Satan-like animals (and anyone who sexually abuses a child is truly Satan-like). However, I call on more states to enact legislation like that which passed in Louisiana, South Carolina, and Oklahoma: pedophiles and those who sexually abuse children/young people should be eligible to receive the death penalty! Now the ACLU (and their progressive supporters) will argue that the punishment is too harsh. My response is, what about the victims who have to live their whole lives with those scars? What about those who have trouble maintaining a relationship because they still have nightmares about the violence? Or those who fight anxiety for the rest of their lives because they constantly live in fear of being abused again? These innocent children have their lives permanently damaged (and some destroyed) by these animals. Therefore these animals deserve the ultimate punishment that the state can give.

As God says in Job 19:29 “Be ye afraid of the sword: for wrath bringeth the punishment of the sword, that ye may know there is a judgment.”

God Bless America,
