Thinking Right

Now the "Most Ethical Administration Ever" and the "Most transparent Legislative Process Ever" joined together to fill the Nation's Easter basket with the foulest smelling eggs ever. Just a casual look at the latest news brings some startling events to light. Snarlin' Harry Reid tried to sneak an amendment into the Obamacare Health Bill that would preclude any legislative process to circumvent, change, rescind or annul the bill. One bright note is that Judge Andrew Napolitano, a Constitutional scholar I respect and upon whom I rely, declared the whole bill will be declared unconstitutional when the various suits prepared by State Attorneys General and reputable lawmakers reach the Supreme Court. By the way, after Rep. Bart Stupak (D-MI) and ten other House members compromised (Caved in) on their pro-life position to deliver the necessary yes-votes to pass health care reform, the "Stupak 11" asked

How the Resurrection Broke Eden's Curse

Trials Have A Purpose

Everybody is either in a trial now or for more than $4.7 billion in earmarks, again showing the price at which these 'pro-lifers' could be bought, two democrats admitted the executive order is a cover that will not reduce abortion funds by even one penny.

Hours after the Congress adjourned, the Ethicists in the White House declared FIFTEEN recess appointments, the Chief Ethicist stating his plan for the bettering of the United States couldn't wait for partisan bickering to delay or stop some of these appointments. It would have been one more, if the media hadn't found out one retired Two-Star General had been approved for the head of the TSA showing preference for a military disability - Sleep Apnea, and had to withdraw his name. Excessive snoring is now a qualification for TSA Chief? Other recess appointees share a socialist background, favor homosexuality, and in the case of the Labor Department, a member of the SIEU that favors placing the card check plan in place by Executive Order. All of these appointments will last until after the next election, giving them nine months to further steer our nation to the left. Recess appointments have their appropriate place, but to use them to further an ideological concept the populace of the U S finds abhorrent only proves the actions of the current Administration are like a snake whose head is being cut off, it flails and thrashes, trying to do the utmost damage before it dies. The democrats are not counting on winning in 2010; they're planning on putting their infrastructure in place now.

"A new broom sweeps clean but the old broom knows the corners" is an old Irish proverb. May I encourage you to bring a new broom to every politically oriented meeting you attend, including Christian Coalition, and let's sweep out the Congress and make a clean start; too many crooked sticks are hidden in the corners! Isaiah 14:23 tells us God will sweep away unrighteousness with a broom of destruction, God further promises to abundantly bless those who follow the precepts of honesty and fair dealing. Under our current Administrative and Legislative leadership, "Truth has stumbled in the public square, and honesty cannot enter." Isaiah 59:14

What Will It Take To Reach 5% Unemployment?

Digging deep into the employment crisis:

8,400,000

That's about how many jobs the Great Recession has stripped from the U.S. economy since December 2007, helping drive the unemployment rate from a manageable 4.9 percent up close to 10 percent.

Replacing those lost jobs isn't the only challenge.

The country's labor pool is expected to grow as the overall population ticks upward. Previously discouraged job seekers not counted in the current unemployment rate will also return to the hunt as the economy improves. The new arrivals, and the returnees, will need jobs, too.

How many jobs will it take?

Just to keep national unemployment steady at 9.7 percent, the country would have to add a conservatively estimated 85,000 jobs a month. Right now, we're still losing jobs - 36,000 in February alone. And no one wants to stay at 9.7 percent unemployment for the long term.

So what would it take to get to 5 percent again?

292,000 new jobs every month until 2015

So, how likely is that?

It would take an extraordinary run of job creation. The boom-boom '90s only created an average of 150,000 jobs a month, a torrent compared to the paltry 50,000 per month average from 1999-2008.

Believe it or not, this information was provided by the St. Petersburg Times. (<http://www.tampabay.com/news/business/article1083134.ece>) My question is, knowing this information how can they continue to support policies and agendas that kill rather than create jobs? This would be a good time to send a letter to the editor and ask that question.

News Update.....

Dems break spirit of law when enacting law...

What happened to the victory lap Obama was supposed to be taking? What happened to the spike in the polls for both him and for health care, for his acclamation as being a man who could govern, and his party, as being able to lead?

What happened to being allowed to "move on," once health care was done with? What happened to his coronation - as some bloggers had it - to being our cooler and new FDR? Well, there was a small spike in the ratings, but it came from his base, which now "strongly approves" as opposed to being indifferent, but the independents who turned against him last summer are angry and not turning back.

He and health care are still underwater, and the ratings for health care itself are abysmal. He is bleeding among the middle class that elected him, and that the health care bill had been drawn to win over. Continue reading HERE

Three quarters of U.S. House sign letter criticizing Obama stance towards Israel

Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu will continue discussions with his senior ministers in the coming days, looking for a way out of the crisis with the US. He received some badly needed support on Friday from 327 congressmen, who signed a letter expressing concern that "the highly publicized tensions" in US-Israeli ties will "not advance the interests" of either state.
